Oral/Visual History

INTERVIEWEE RELEASE AGREEMENT

Thank you for agreeing to be interviewed by the Deming Cooperative – The Institute for Visual History for permitting the Deming Cooperative to add your videotaped interview to its Archive.

Established in 2015 collect and preserve the testimonials, remembrances, and stories of people associated with Dr. W. Edwards Deming. The Deming Cooperative maintains the only video digital library associated with this topic. The Deming Cooperative believes these testimonials, remembrances and stories are an excellent source of conveying the meaning of Dr. Deming's theories to future generations and will have a profound educational significance.

Consistent with these purposes, we are creating an archive or repository of video interviews with people who knew, worked, or was heavily influenced by Dr. Deming. We may use the interview edited or unedited, by itself or combined with other interviews or with other materials, in any medium including literary, print, audio, audio-visual, computer-based (e.g. Internet) or any other medium now known or created in the future.

Deming Cooperative will own the copyright to the interview in each territory throughout the world (including any renewals or extensions), as well as all other rights of any kind to the interview. In addition, you graciously grant the Deming Cooperative, our successors and assigns, the right to use the interview, translate the interview, and use your name, photograph, likeness, voice, biography, performances, and photographs, artifacts, documents and other personal material, provided to the Deming Cooperative or its agents or assigns at any time by you or on your behalf, throughout the world and in perpetuity, in connection with the uses and media described above. However, we are not obligated to use all or any of the interview, name or personal material in any work.

Deming Cooperative will also have the right to license the interview to others who may use the interview in any medium. However, we would only permit the interview to be used in connection with works or projects that we believe have educational or historical value.

By granting the Deming Cooperative the rights to your videotaped testimony, we understand that we are not obtaining the exclusive right to your life story, but only the rights to this particular videotaped interview. Therefore, by signing this agreement, you do not give up your right to write books or articles, make motion pictures or film documentaries, make television programs or appear on television shows, appear in other video testimonies for other organizations, lecture about your life or experiences, or prevent you from entering into legal contracts with regard to making any or all of the above.

From time to time, the Deming Cooperative is contacted by organizations who want to share information with or collect research information from individuals we have interviewed. Would you like your name and address made available to those organizations which we feel may be of interest to you?
